GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE
TO BOTH BRANCHES OF THE LEGISLATURE OF MAINE, JANUARY, 1836.
Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

In assembling to discharge the important duties assigned to us respectively by the people, let us be grateful to our beneficent Providence, by whom our State has been preserved during the year that has just closed, from any calamity or popular commotion.

Nothing occurred since the meeting of the last Legislature, to interrupt the increasing prosperity of the State: industry of every class has been in constant and unprecedented demand, and has received corresponding reward; the agriculturist has been most bountifully blessed, both in his seed time and in his harvest, and our commerce has sustained its elevated character for successful enterprise upon every sea, under the watchful guardianship of the National Administration.

At such a juncture in our history as a State, and under circumstances so prosperous and full of pleasing promise in relation to the future, the demands of the public for general legislation are necessarily few, and such as do exist are happily of a character, calculated to produce, very little dissipation or difference of opinion.

Among the subjects of this class, Agriculture holds a primary rank. It must at all periods present prominent claims upon the favorable consideration of the Legislative department of Government. Agriculture lies at the foundation of all national wealth and strength—it is the parent of manufactures, the nurse of commerce, and the staff upon which all the arts and sciences lean for support. To encourage this necessary and advantageous pursuit of the citizen, by every provision calculated to elevate its character and extend its influence, is the obvious duty of the legislator and patriot at all times and in every government. In our own State particularly, where so vast an extent of territory, well adapted to the purposes of the husbandman, lies unoccupied and unimproved, much may be done towards the increase of agricultural resources, by a liberal policy in legislation. To the actual possession, every facility which does not involve a positive expense to the public Treasury, ought to be extended. An abundant recompense for it will be found in the acquisition which it will secure to the population, and consequently to the aggregate wealth of the State.

An enlargement of the existing number of Agriculturists within a State, is also the most effective method of preparing in time of peace for the exigencies of a state of war, a principle which enters into the policy of every prudent administration of Government. In all ages, and in all countries in which civilization has made any progress, men identified with the soil, and having an actual interest in its riches and its resources, have invariably been found among the ablest in its defence. Various considerations combine to awaken in them a fervor of patriotism, and to induce a sincerity of purpose, which do not operate upon citizens, whose attachment to the soil is founded only in accidental or transitory circumstances.

Believing this subject to be of great and increasing importance to the prosperity of our State, it will give me pleasure, gentlemen, to co-operate with you in any course of measures which your wisdom may devise for its direct encouragement, and I cannot forbear to invite the exercise of the utmost liberality on your part that may be thought consistent with your power as legislators.

A foundation may be laid for great increase of wealth in our State, by disseminating practical information upon the subject of cultivating mulberry tree and the raising of silk worms for the manufacture of silk. It cannot be doubted that for the purposes, numerous advantages are possessed by our citizens. And in view of what is doing in our States of the Union in this important and growing branch of manufactures, it must be worthy of our consideration, whether thru' public munificence though exercised upon a comparatively limited scale, an impulse may not be given to individual enterprise upon this subject that will redound hereafter to your own honor as provident guardians of the public good and to the incalculable benefit of the State at large.

The cultivation of Hemp is another branch of agricultural industry, which is commended to your consideration, as highly worthy of additional encouragement by the State. It is a product adapted to our soil and climate, to a degree unappreciated as yet, perhaps, by a majority of those who are immediately interested in its improvement. It is of a nature to resist successfully the droughts and frosts, that so seriously affect many other vegetable productions on which the husbandman in this State has been accustomed to rely, as the principal reward of his industry. A practical illustration of the numerous advantages to be secured by the cultivation of Hemp, would be of direct value to the public as well as most satisfactory to the agriculturist. This may probably be attained to the full extent desired, by the institution of a limited system of bounties to the cultivator.

A geological survey of the State upon a basis commensurate with the magnitude and variety of its territory, and corresponding to the present suspicious condition of the public Treasury, is earnestly commended to your attention.
It is an enterprise, that may rightfully claim the encouragement of every class of industry, as involving more or less of probable utility to each.
It is intimately connected with the advancement of the arts and sciences, of agriculture, manufactures, and commerce. Aside from the hidden treasures of the State, which a survey of the kind suggested, may develop, to recompense a hundred fold the expense of it, the incidental information relative to the topographical features of the State, which must accrue from the work, would be of lasting importance to the prosecution of subsequent works of internal improvement, particularly in the location of railroads and canals. Already several States have executed similar surveys within their respective limits, and in no instance it is believed, to the regret of any portion of their citizens. With the foresight and liberality becoming a great nation, possessed of a vast domain of uncertain value, the Federal Government has given us an example of this nature, which cannot fail sooner or later to be followed by every State in the Union. It is by the enlistment of science of this manner, with the means that government possesses, that the conveniences and wealth, which would otherwise be left to be disclosed to posterity by accident, can be secured and enjoyed by the present generation. In view of the wide and inviting field before us, which the territory of this State presents, and the knowledge that prevails for information of this character lying beyond the reach of every individual enterprise, I cannot conceive the policy of the measure, suggested, to be at this day in any degree doubtful. Its expediency however, involves a question, which is appropriately within your exclusive province to decide, and I invite your attention to it, under the full conviction, that you will duly appreciate its importance.

The means already in operation for the general diffusion of knowledge in the State, are both creditable and efficient. There it however at all times more to be apprehended from neglect in relation to this important subject by legislators, than from excess of encouragement.
In this connexion I know of no measure more urgent or better calculated to secure permanent advantage to our common schools, than that which I have heretofore had occasion to present for the consideration of the Legislature.— I allude to the making of additional provision for the education of school instructors. Little else is needed to render our system of primary schools as perfect as can be desired. I must however refer to the views presented upon this topic, in a former message to the Legislature for the further illustration of it which I desire to place before you, only adding, that observation and reflection have since concurred to strengthen in my own mind the convictions there expressed.

If the Legislature in the present flourishing state of our finances, should think favorably of extending a portion of the public bounty of the higher seminaries of learning as contemplated by the Constitution, I would respectfully recommend, that some system be devised and adopted, by which a regular and just distribution may be made to the Institutions, having reference to the necessities and usefulness of each, and to the past appropriations, which several of them have received from the State. To ensure however correctness of legislation, permit me to suggest, that accurate returns should be required, annually from each of these Institutions, of the number taught, the several branches of study pursued, the amount annually paid for instruction, and any other items on which information may seem desirable.

I have the satisfaction to inform you, that the sum of twenty thousand dollars has been raised by individual donations, in aid of the establishment on an Insane Hospital. An eligible site upon the east bank of the Kennebec river in Augusta has been purchased for this purpose, and a deed conveying the premises to the State has been duly executed. It has not however, as yet, been deemed expedient to appoint a Board of Commissioners, to superintend the erection of the buildings, as it is now, I believe, satisfactorily ascertained that it would be more for the interest of the State, to entrust this duty to a single individual. Upon mature deliberation you should coincide with this opinion. I would respectfully suggest, whether legislative action upon this subject may not be necessary.

Under the resolve of the twenty-fourth of March last, a sum not exceeding four thousand dollars was appropriated for the benevolent purpose of aiding our indigent blind, in procuring an education at the New England Asylum in Boston. In accordance with the provisions of this Resolve, seven blind persons from this State are now enjoying the benefits of this valuable institution. We have also at the American Asylum in Hartford, fourteen deaf and dumb pupils, supported wholly or in part, at the expense of the State.

By recurring to the proceedings of the last Legislature you will find that a Resolve was passed authorizing the Governor with the advice of Council, to appoint Commissioners to report a system of Prison Discipline for the State together with the best location and most suitable construction of buildings for a new State Prison the additional means of the State for erecting such buildings at the present location, with an estimate of the expense of completing the proposed establishment. In conformity to the authority vested in the Executive, the trust was confided to William D. Williamson, Nathaniel Clark and Joseph R. Abbot, Esquires, who have been assiduously engaged in the discharge of the duties devolving upon them by this appointment. The report of the Commissioners will be laid before you at an early period of your session, agreeably to a provision of the Resolve under which they were appointed.

In pursuance of a resolve of the last Legislature, "in relation to a Railroad from some point on the Atlantic sea board to the City of Quebec," an application was made to the President of the United States, for the services of an engineer, to aid in the contemplated survey.— The request was promptly complied with, and the trust was confided by the Secretary of War to a gentleman in the service of the federal government, of much practical skill, who devoted several months to a careful reconnaissance of different routes within this State. His report has not as yet been received. I am informed, however, that it will shortly be ready to be submitted to your consideration.

The Commissioners appointed agreeably to the Resolve of the 10th March last, to consult upon the same subject with the civil authorities of the Canada, and others, have attended to the duty entrusted to them, and a copy of their Report is herewith laid before you.

A Resolve having been passed by the last Legislature constituting the Governor, the members of the Council, and the Land Agent a Board of Internal Improvements, they immediately organized themselves for the performance of the duties assigned to them by this Resolve. A competent Engineer was selected by the Board, who has been in active service since his appointment. His surveys and reports, as soon as received, will be submitted for the inspection and consideration of the Legislature.

The annual Report of the Adjutant General will be laid before you at an early day, and will make you acquainted with the present condition of our Militia. By the last returns it appears that the numerical force of the Militia of this State as exhibited by the Muster Rolls was forty thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven men.

There were forwarded to me from the War Department in the month of July last, ten hundred and ninety-one stands of arms, and fourteen pieces of ordnance, with the necessary military equipments, by virtue of an act of Congress for arming the whole body of the Militia, passed April 23, 1803. They have been committed to the custody of the acting Quarter Master General, and are now subject to the disposition of the Legislature.

The Report of the Land Agent will exhibit in detail the concerns of that Department for the past year. It will be laid before you by special message.

It affords me pleasure to say to you, that the Baring and Houston road has at length been completed, and that the Agent for superintending its construction has made a Report of his doings to the office of the Secretary of State, agreeable to a provision of the Resolve upon this subject, of March 5, 1832.

I have received information from the Land Agent, that under a Resolve of the last Legislature "for the benefit of certain officers and soldiers of the Revolutionary War, &c. and the widows of the deceased officers and soldiers," he has already issued two hundred and twenty-seven certificates entitling the holders to as many lots of land of two hundred acres each. This is the whole number of lots, which the townships appropriated for this purpose are estimated to contain, exclusive of reservations for public uses.
Additional claims have been presented to the Land Agent, and by him approved. In order therefore to carry into full effect the design of the original Resolve, I would submit to your consideration the expediency of making some further appropriation to satisfy these claims.

It will be recollected that the Legislatures of 1828 appropriated twenty townships of land to create a fund, the income of which was to be applied to the support of Primary Schools.— These townships have been selected, and three of them have been lotted for the purpose of being sold during the current year. Some Legislative provision is necessary for the investment of this fund.

An enactment is also needed for the investment of the fund belonging to the Penobscot tribe of Indians. This, on the first day of the present month amounted to sixty-two thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars and twenty-one cents. Fifty thousand dollars of this sum being the avails of four townships of land purchased of them by the State, and eight thousand dollars received from individuals for land and timber belonging to this tribe, with the interest on the said sums. Two thousand dollars more are due from the same persons, which when received at the Treasury will be added to this fund.

I recommend, therefore, that a Board of Commissioners be established for the purpose of investing and managing these funds, conforming in substance to the mode proposed in the Report of the Treasurer of State, which will in due time be laid before you.

In connection with this subject, I submit the propriety of causing the lands belonging to the Passamaquoddy Tribe of Indians (excepting a small lot in the town of Perry,) to be sold, and the avails funded for their benefit. They are not wanted by the Indians for cultivation, and are greatly exposed to the inroads of trespassers, the more so on account of their proximity to a foreign State, into which offenders with their plunder may easily escape.

In relation to the North Eastern Boundary, I have received no other intelligence during the past year than that which has recently been made public, by the annual Message of the National Executive to Congress. It may with confidence be expected, that the good understanding now existing between the United States and Great Britain, alike honorable to both nations will lead to such an adjustment of our border difficulties, as will receive the ratification of the people of this State.

It cannot have escaped our observation, that the act passed at the last session of the Legislature, prohibiting the use and circulation of Bank bills of the denomination of one dollar, and of other denominations prospectively, has not been sufficient, unaided by auxiliary provisions, to effect the obvious design of the Legislature in its enactment. The experience of Several States in the Union, where for many years past, paper money of small denominations has been excluded from circulation, attests the wisdom of the theory upon which the Act in question was founded. But connected with its expediency is now combined a just vindication of the Legislative authority of the State, in favor of such additional enactments as shall be effectual, in the suppression of the prohibited classes of Bank bills. I shall cheerfully co-operate with you in any measures you may deem calculated to effect the object in view, believing that the best interest of the public will be essentially promoted, by the complete execution of the policy, on which the before named Act is founded.

The condition of the Treasury is truly gratifying. The past year has brought much prosperity to the finances of the State. All our redeemable debt has been extinguished, and the whole funded debt now outstanding, amounts to but fifty-five thousand dollars. The moneys received into the Treasury from all sources during the year, amount to three hundred and ten thousand, four hundred and fifty three dollars and twenty-one cents. Of this sum, one hundred and thirty three thousand, five hundred and sixty seven dollars and fifty five cents, were derived from the Land Department. This liberal contribution has arisen not so much from an excess in the quantity of land sold, as from an increase in the price. And here I cannot forget the remark, that the public domain is of incalculable value. If it be guarded with vigilance, and disposed by slow degrees, the revenue to be derived from it, may ultimately be made to meet the ordinary expenses of our government, and supply ample endowments to many of those benevolent institutions for relieving the infirmities, or alleviating the sorrows of the unfortunate, and for advancing the interests of religion, science and literature, which more than commercial wealth or martial conquest vi-vince the true elevation of a community.

The disbursement of the Treasury have been three hundred and four thousand, one hundred and eleven dollars and thirty four cents. Of this sum, one hundred and forty eight thousand and twelve dollars and fifty three cents, have gone to reduce the principal and interest of the Public Debt. But notwithstanding the magnitude of this item, the resources of the department yet exceed its liabilities.

In January last, the funded debt due from the State, amounted to one hundred and thirty four thousand four hundred and sixty six dollars and seventy five cents. In the early part of the year, additional sums were borrowed amounting to fifty nine thousand dollars. By the payment of one hundred and thirty eight thousand four hundred and sixty six dollars and seventy five cents, the principal of these claims has been reduced to fifty five thousand dollars as before named.

There has been paid for interest the sum of nine thousand, five hundred and forty five dollars and seventy eight cents, and the balance of cash now in the Treasury, is six thousand three hundred and forty one dollars, and eighty seven cents.

Satisfactory as this exposition must be, it must be equally gratifying for you to know, that the public securities in the possession of the Land Agent, including a small amount of cash in his hands, constitute an amount of more than three hundred and seventy thousand dollars.

It is provided by the Constitution of the United States, that each State shall appoint Electors of President and Vice President, in such manner as the Legislature thereof, may direct.
An election of these officers will take place in the course of the current political year. It will therefore be incumbent upon you, at your present session, to prescribe the manner, in which the election on the part of this State shall be conducted.

As it will be necessary for me during the Session, to communicate with you from time to time, by special Message, I will only add, that I shall zealously co-operate with you, in carrying into effect such measures as shall seem best calculated to promote the essential interests of our constituents, and to strengthen and perpetuate the Union of the States.

ROBERT P. DUNLAP.
COUNCIL CHAMBER,
January, 1836.

From the Boston Statesman.
STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.
Washington, December 29, 1835.

In the House, Mr. Cambreleng moved to suspend the Rules for the purpose of allowing Committees to report bills—the House refused; he then moved to suspend the Rules to allow the Committee of Ways and Means to report the appropriation Bills; this also was objected to, and a count called for; when 93 rose in the affirmative and 50 in the negative—the motion requiring two thirds, was lost.

The House then proceeded to receive Petitions, calling the States in order, beginning with Mass. Most of the Members had from one to half a dozen petitions, &c. to present, principally of private and local interest. I left the House in the smouldering ruins of New-York, and followed the popular current to the Senate; where I found Mr. Clay in an oratorical posture, making love in a long speech to his favorite Dulcinea, the Land Bill. He spoke of the overflowing treasury and increasing revenue; of the constitutional right that the States had to the distribution of the public lands, the importance it would be to internal improvement, education, &c. &c. Descending from tropes, he went into figures, to show that this small state would receive her half million, another one, her million; and Pennsylvania, I think, about two millions!— all which amounts to how much per head? In short, he only repeated his old argument to purchase the presidency; and his old bribe, about one dollar and a half a head—to be paid to the people in their own money. As Sheridan said, "how can I pay you, unless you lend me the money?" He spoke with deep emotion when alluding to the disappointment of losing the Bill, after it had once passed both Houses, by the President's retaining it; and said if he had retained it and sent it back, it would have still been passed by the constitutional majority. If this be a fact, it only shows the foresight and sagacity of the President. The people, I must say, have borne their disappointment much better than their eloquent and ambitious benefactor;— for they have uttered no complaints about "that dollar and a half."

The public Lands belong to the government, just as much as the surplus revenue; and if Mr.
Calhoun thinks a charge in the constitution necessary to distribute the surplus, we recommend Mr. Clay to club with him, and have it changed a little more, for the distribution of Lands.— But a greater change, I apprehend, will await us all—the present generation, and their aspiring benefactors—before any change takes place in the constitution for either of the unconstitutional purposes.

After showing what a world of good had been withheld from the people by the dog-in-the-manger policy, and the "spoils" prodigality of the government, Mr. Clay concluded his per-oration, with a pathetic eulogy upon himself—his early life, his portionless fortune, his friendless lot, &c., &c. I would have better become him, I think, to have eulogized Cancellor Wythe. There have been few young men in the country who have had the good fortune to be taken under the protection and patronage, and to enjoy the counsel and friendship of such a man as Wythe. Jefferson was proud to acknowledge his obligation to him. Mr. Clay modestly attributed every thing to himself.

But I pass to Mr. Calhoun. In addition to the work he had laid out yesterday, he offered a resolution to-day to "modify the compromise, by reducing the duties on all articles consistent with the safety of the Manufacturing interest." Well, here is the Tariff again! and here are North and South to be brought again into the field of mortal strife.

"Each battle sees the other's number'd feet!" Mr. C. said the treasury now had about 21 millions surplus, and would soon have 30. It would be a struggle between power and liberty. He hoped the Committee on Manufactures would soon report the Bills, &c.—his object was to control the surplus fund, the great source of all the evils of the country.

Mr. Davis hoped the Senate would not vote to instruct the Committee, but on one consideration; and moved to lay the subject on the table one day; to which Mr. C. consented.

REIS EFFENDI.

Washington, Dec. 31, 1835.

The old year has passed off in a whirlwind of debate, amidst mingled curses against banking corporations, and muttered wrath against inquisitorial committees, appointed to make them render an account of their stewardships.

The bar of public opinion is a grave tribunal where, if the accused be acquitted, the accuser is sure to be condemned. Such is now the position of the administration party against the banking habits of the District of Columbia. The issue remains to be tried; the Lord send for or the other of them a good deliverance."

Before the debate commenced on the District banks this morning, Mr. Wardwell of New York moved to suspend the Rules, to offer a Resolution for "withholding the use of the Hall for public worship on Sundays." The House refused.

On calling up the subject of the Bank Committee, Mr. Thomas urged the propriety of investigating the condition of the banks.

Mr. McKenney of Pa. offered an amendment to the "instructions," requiring the committee to ascertain the names of the members of Congress and officers of the government, to whom loans had been made since the deposit bank had been established in this city; giving as a reason, that the like course had been taken against the United States Bank. And he called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Canby of N. Y. opposed the call, as taking too much time.

Mr. Thomas offered to accept the amendment, if the phraseology were so changed as to conform to the instructions of Committee of the United States Bank in 1832. He was of that Committee, but opposed to publishing the names of borrowers. Unless he suspected the character of the security, he would not have the names disclosed; but would leave it to the discretion of the Committee. If he had cause to suspect friend or foe, he would lay before the public any improper practice. He would modify the amendment so as to make it discretionary to disclose names.

Mr. Beardsley was willing to have the inquiry extend to members of Congress and officers of the government, borrowers since the bank had received deposits. He spoke of false lists having been furnished by the U. S. Bank, exhibiting those as borrowers who were only indorsers and sureties. He said the list referred to [by Mr. Thomas] never deserved to see the light—hoped the gentleman from Md. (Mr. T.) would consent to the inquiry, and suffer the amendment to be adopted.

Mr. Thomas wished to be understood as not opposing the amendment, if the House urged it—he wished to conform to the instructions of 1832.

Mr. W. B. Shepard thought the officers of the bank incapable of falsehood, as the gentleman from New York (Mr. B.) intimated; and hoped the amendment would not be withdrawn. There was no reason why the acts of public institution should be secret, the names of borrowers should be known. He felt no shame when his name was published to his district—he gave security.

Mr. Beardsley said he spoke of a particular transaction that was a falsity to his knowledge.

Mr. Adams inquired how and where he (Mr. B.) became possessed of the paper containing a list of the names?

Mr. B. said he saw the paper in the Hall, but did not recollect who had it.

Mr. McLennan would not consent to have his amendment modified for the discretion of the Committee, to let their friends see the list—he wanted the House and the whole nation to see it.

Mr. Adams said he should vote against the amendment [of Mr. McK] and the instructions [of Mr. Thomas] on the ground of consistency with his former course. At the 21st Congress, he took the ground, that no private concerns of the Bank were subject to investigation—the House was at that time against it; and the Committee were so limited and confined. He was of the Committee sent to investigate the condition of the U. S. Bank. The Committee demanded a list of the debtors of the Bank; he opposed it—it was not a power given by the House;—a majority of the committee determined otherwise. He then took the same ground as now against exposing one name and concealing another—a discretionary power. But the officers of the Bank did furnish a list of names—The President opened every thing, giving notice that the Bank did not wish to conceal any thing. Nothing was denied. A list of Members of Congress and officers of the Government was furnished;—letters from persons high in office, for loans on time, and years. But this was a two edged sword—it cut both sides; and the Committee were determined to keep it to themselves. This was against his views—he was as urgent to have it exposed as he was against its being called for. He did not know as he should have been suffered to remain a member of the House after he had made his minority report. But let us have no discretionary powers, said he;—fair play is a jewel"—acts on both sides; let the thing be done in an impartial manner, that no accusation of false returns may be made five years after, when there is no time or means for defence. He wanted no secret charges to be made; and could not vote for Mr. McK's proposition.

But I can't follow the speakers through the long debate, which was finally arrested by the previous question. The result was a commitment of the subject to a select Committee of nine, with the instructions proposed by Mr. Thomas. The House adjourned to Monday without changing the Committee.

From the Eastern Argus.

WASH. NOTON, Jan. 4, 1836.

It was expected a Message would have been received from the President to-day, on the subject of our relations with France; but the nature of the despatches (if any) by the late arrival, is not yet made public. M. Pageot, the French Charge d'Affaires, will dispose of his personal effects on Wednesday, at auction; and probably leave the country soon. This step, I apprehend, is not to be considered in itself as indicating any hostile intentions on the part of his government, but only intended as a matter of etiquette to conform to a corresponding movement on the part of our legation. Our Consul, Mr. Brent, and the Vice Consul, Mr. Bradford, who has resided many years at Paris, are both highly esteemed by the French, as well as by all American residents; and are in all respects qualified to protect the interests and honor of our country, with which they are charged. There is no probability of any change in the political relation of the two countries till the President's Message shall be received at Paris, and then, if any should take place, it is far more likely to be propitious than untoward. In my opinion, there is no probability of a war with France, arising out of the present misunderstanding; such a measure would be against her interest; and as for her honor, she withholds the twenty-five millions as a hostage for its safety! This she makes the point of honor. As for us, it is as well known at Paris as at Washington, that the majority in the Senate would oppose a declaration of war, if they mean to maintain their consistency. There is therefore, not the least probability of hostilities. And yet a contrary opinion prevails in the city to-day—based upon what grounds, I cannot learn. A day or two will probably settle the question; and I will therefore dismiss it.

The Senate was engaged to-day in discussing the Judiciary Bill, a measure preparatory to acting upon the Judicial nominations, and an apology for deferring them. I was not present; but learned that Mr. Leigh and others spoke in support of Mr. Wright's new District Court in New York; and accordingly offered an amendment; and Mr. Buchanan wanted one in Pa.

In the House, presentation of Petitions being in order, Mr. Smith of Maine presented several; Mr. Cushman of New Hampshire some; and when it came to the turn of old Massachusetts.

Mr. Adams presented one for the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia, giving notice that he intended to move to lay it on the table.

Mr. Glascock of Ga. immediately moved to reject the Petition. And here a debate commenced which lasted till a very late hour, when the House adjourned without coming to any decision. Mr. G. stated it to be his intention in making the motion, to show that the House had the right to reject the petition, though without the right of impairing the right of petition.

Mr. Adams soon called him to order for debating the reception of a petition, and referred to the 45th Rule of the House.

The Chair decided the motion to reject to be in order; from which Mr. Adams appeals.

It would be in vain to think of attempting to repeat the arguments of either side. Mr. Adams was sustained in his views by Messrs. Mercer, Sutherland, Read, Briggs, Vanderpool, Bell and Everett; and the Chair was supported by Messrs. Glascock, Beardsley, Mann, Jr., Williams, Patton (who said he should vote for Mr. Adams's appeal, as he was understood by a number around me.) Underwood, Thomas, Hamer, and Byrum.

The question was really one that did not literally come within any Rule; but if any, it would seem to be the 45th, which the Chair decided it did not come within.

The Speaker proceeded with admirable coolness and impartiality, declaring that he had no pride of opinion on the subject; that he should be entirely satisfied with whatever way the House decided; and that he would much prefer to have their decision than to abide by any opinion of his own. The tone and temper in which he spoke operated like a charm, and secured a change to the tone of the debate. It seems only necessary for him to meet with difficulties, to insure, by the manner he surmounts them, the increased approbation and confidence of the House. He always maintains a most enviable self-possession, and never for a moment forgets either his dignity or his duty.

A large number of petitions were presented, read, and referred to the appropriate Committees.

The House then adjourned.

On Wednesday a somewhat interesting case occurred in the House of Representatives, viz. of Maine.

Resolved, That in the opinion of the House, the subject of the Abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia ought not to be introduced by Congress; and be it further resolved, that in case any petition praying the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia be hereafter presented, it is the deliberate opinion of this House, without being referred or printed.

Before any decision was had on the resolution the House proceeded to the orders of the day.

The only account we have of the proceedings of Thursday is from the correspondent of the Portland Courier. In the Senate three or four hours were spent in the discussion of the abolition question. Messrs. Calhoun, Preston, Tyler, Leigh, and others took part in the debate. In the House, Mr. J. Q. Adams obtained the floor, and called the attention of the House to the fact, that the Mexican harbors had been blockaded against American vessels, and called for information from the chairman of the committee on Foreign Affairs, but none could be furnished. The rest of the day was spent in the presentation of sundry petitions and resolutions from the several States and members, most of them uninteresting. At 4 o'clock the House adjourned, over to Monday next.—The Age.

THE CANADAS.

The affairs of our northern neighbors, the British Colonies, attract but very little attention in the United States. It is seldom that an article on the subject finds its way into one of our newspapers, and when such a thing does occur, we only learn from it that the St. Lawrence is frozen up, or a large number of emigrants have arrived at Quebec, or something else of the same kind. Probably very few persons in this country know that in Canada a quarrel is in progress which will probably end at no very distant day with its independence.

The history of these Colonies may be told very briefly. In 1759, they were conquered from France by the British under the gallant Wolfe, and at that time contained only about 70,000 inhabitants. By the peace of 1763, they were regularly ceded to Britain, and the religion and property of the Canadians secured.

they were covered by Orders in Council, that is by the arbitrary will of the British Minister. In 1774, the English Criminal Law with Jury trial was introduced by Statute of Parliament: and in 1778 the power of taxing them for the benefit of the mother country, was relinquished. In 1791, the form of government under which the Canadians now live, was instituted by Mr. Pitt, then Prime Minister. The whole Colony was divided into two parts called Upper and Lower Canada. Each had a similar government resembling the British Constitution in plan: there being a Governor, a Legislative Council, and a House of Commons, like the King, Lords, and Commons in England. The Governor is nominated by the King, during pleasure; and the members of the Legislative Council are named by the King for life. The members of the House of Commons are chosen by the people, the right of suffrage being limited to 25 freeholders in the rural district, and to 210 freeholders in the towns. These three different parts of the government ought to have a mutual check upon each other, but this is not the case. The Governor and Legislative Council draw together, or rather the Governor, coming from England a stranger, is wholly under the influence of the Council which is entirely composed of Tories who are opposed to the true interests of the Colony and the liberty of its inhabitants. Continual difficulties and disagreements are taking place between the Commons on the one side, and the Governor and Council on the other. The grounds of all these quarrels, in the language of advertisements, are too numerous to mention. Some few may be related.

The mother Country, England, has recently surrendered the power of levying taxes for her benefit, without the consent of the Colonists, but by her no direct taxes are imposed. But something much worse than this is done. England claims through her deputy the Governor, the exclusive disposal of a large share of the actual funds of the State without the knowledge or consent of the Representatives of the people.—More than four fifths of the inhabitants of Canada are Roman Catholics, and a majority of the remaining fifth are dissenters. And yet of all the lands granted, one seventh is reserved for the clergy of the Church of England without any provision of a free kind being made for the other clergy. Besides, the English Bishop, with a small fraction of the people under his care, receives a salary of 12,000 dollars; while the French Catholic Bishop, with a vast majority of the people, has but 4000 dollars.—The Governor and Council demand of the Representatives, that they should vote all the supplies in masses, without any details being given, or any explanations as for what the money was wanted. For a dozen years this point was contested between the Executive and Commons, before the Executive was brought to reason.—The Commons are from the people and are therefore the advocates of liberty. They have ever been striving for this end, and almost every bill which they pass favorable to liberty is very sure to be modified or rejected by the Council. Thus, in fact, of pressing importance, regulating the judiciary, making it necessary that members of the Assembly accept offices of trust and profit under the Executive should vacate their seats, incapacitating judges from sitting and voting in the Council, as being political duties inconsistent with the purity and efficiency of the judicial office, establishing local office, establishing a local judiciary, advancing the cause of Education, reflecting the Dissenters, and very many of these have been rejected by the Council. Parliament one hundred and twenty-two bills of this kind have been thus rejected; and forty-seven more have been so mutilated that the Commons could not accept them.

For twenty-five years the Colonists have been petitioning the King for a redress of these grievances. In 1831, they sent a memorial to the throne, instancing ninety-one causes of dissatisfaction and injustice: all of them equally bad with those we have related. In the memorial they use strong language; they tell his Majesty that they are wronged, oppressed that they have studied the history of the United States, and their own resources; that he should learn wisdom from the past; and they thunder in his ears the word Congress, than which nothing can be more horrifying to the ears of a British king. The only address they have gained by the British Government, to seek if there are any real causes of complaint. No good results are anticipated from this Commission, as it is well understood both in the Colony and at home, that it is a merely temporising expedient.

The quarrel between the Governor and Legislature, Council, and the Commons, seems to be approaching an issue. The misunderstanding stated above, and in part more directly by a cupied by the British troops as barracks.—The Commons claim restitution of this property to certain schools to which they say it belongs. The Governor and Council are unable to deny the validity of this claim: they have fully admitted it, but have resolutely refused to make the demanded restitution. The Commons, or which is the same, the people have been much offended at this, have declared that it was brought about by the Council which they declared to be too much under the influence of the British Minister of the day, and have demanded that this body should be made elective by the people like themselves. To bring this about they have entered into solemn resolutions

The British Government should have learned something by the history of the United States. We suffered grievances, revolted when we had but 3 millions of inhabitants, and conquered our independence. The Canadas in 1832, contained 1,400,000 inhabitants, having increased 200 per cent. in 25 years. In eight or ten years they will have their three millions, and advantages which we did not possess—the neighborhood of 16 millions of republicans, and no savages. It seems inevitable that one of two things should take place:—either Great Britain must make the government of the Canadas republican, or the Colonists themselves will so make it by revolution.

reverting the entire Federal party, and the majority are too well founded on the basis of immutable truth to think of compromise or concession to their invertebrate opponents. The telegraph and Sun,—the White and Harrison editions—would rejoice to place Mr. Van Buren in such a position as to be identified, with any man or truth, with the heresies of Daniel Webster. Such a state of things would do wonders for the Potomac. But it cannot be. Mr. Webster belongs to the Federal party, soul and body, and they must have him, with all the unmitigated odium of his political heresies un-cannot, however, yet bring ourselves to the belief that the present misunderstanding will terminate in a which must be injurious to both parties. In this may be mistaken, but if so it is because the French war to peace, and in that case, no apology would tumble enough to avert that result. The country casts an unusual degree of unanimity on the subject and though there may be individuals less enough to some who called themselves Americans in the war, yet we see no reason to suppose that any considerable party among us, would be guilty of the moral of favoring, even with their wishes, the enemies of our country. But it is useless to indulge further in speculations about what may never happen, when we expect soon to hear something more definitive on the subject.

Our Currency is a vast inflated superstructure of paper resting upon a thin and inadequate sub stratum of gold and silver.

Does any man doubt that this is literal truth in regard to the currency of the country? One specie circulation when compared to that of France, or England amounts to scarcely a fraction. France has a specie currency of upwards of five hundred millions of dollars, and England has a gold and silver circulation more than one hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

the Courier says:—“Mr. Clay, as Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations in the Senate, will report on our affairs with France; I have good reason for believing that he will recommend the opening of fresh negotiations.”—We cannot believe that Mr. Clay will make any such recommendation, or that the majority of the Senate, if it is made, will be so foolish as to all sense of the honor and dignity of their country as to approve it. A treaty with France has been made and ratified, and France has violated it. He who would tamely submit to the violation of it, and even enter upon negotiations with a new treaty with the same nation, cannot be an American—must be a traitor or a craven. the Age.
